A Senior Monologue

BY M. B. ANDREWS, '14

The world is too big for a self-conscious man
With the heart of an unlettered child,
With a mind that is young and an untrained tongue,
Facing ruins that are mountainous piled;
The world is too big and her problems too great
For a lad who merely has smiled,
Shed a tear, or sung a song through his whole life long,
While the rest of mankind has gone wild.

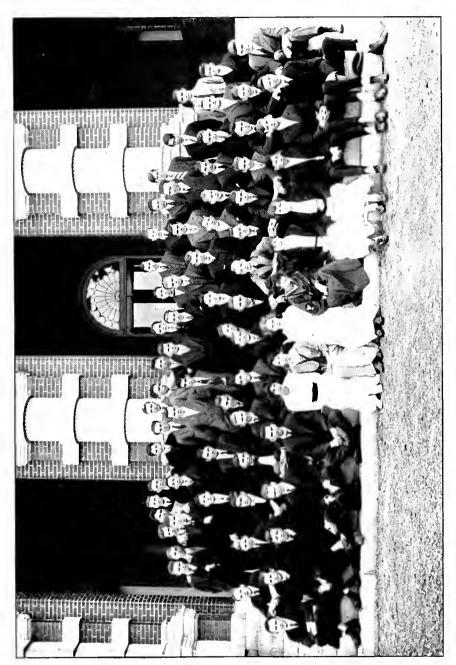

The world is so big and her forces so strong
It is useless to fight against fate—
I had pictured my life in a home with a wife
Whom God had designed as my mate,
And had thought of myself as a masterful man,
But—I've come to the struggle too late;
Or else I was born in the world's early morn,
Unfit for her labors of hate.

Oh, what can I do in a world so large
That is teeming with millions of men
Who are wasting their souls, their health, and their wealth
For the pleasures and tortures of sin?
Oh, what can I do for a world that is lost
As never before it has been?
There is naught I can do, save to lose myself, too—
So what is the use to begin?

The Trinity Spirit

BY B. L. SMITH

Have you felt in the rush of work,
In the midst of the busy day,
The lilt of a thought that is kind and great,
The lilt of a thought you cannot say?
Oh, it's a thought that is good and true,
It's a thought of the White and Blue!

Have you felt in the hush of even,
In the ring of the curfew bell,
The tune of a song that is low and sweet,
The tune of a song you cannot tell?
Oh, it a song that is good and true,
It's a song of the White and Blue!

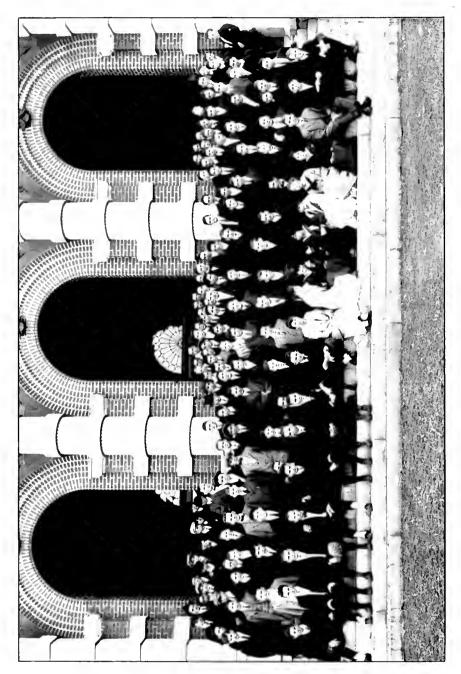

Have you felt o'er the din of life,
At the song of the parting knell,
The throb of a spirit that's humble and strong,
The throb of a spirit you cannot tell?
Oh, it's a spirit that is good and true,
It's the soul of the White and Blue!

Varsity Track Season of 1915

THE close of the 1915 track season marked the close of the fourth and most successful season in track athletics in the history of the college. With only five "T" men as a nucleus, Captain Matton put out one of the best track teams in the State. The improvement that our team showed over the 1914 season was almost incredible. In the two intercollegiate meets that Trinity entered the past season, our team came out victorious with overwhelming scores, and in the annual State Meet it won second place.

The first meet was held April 9, 1915, on Trinity's new athletic field, with Elon College, which put out last season her first track team. In this meet the superior material and training of our team won for us a 98 to 10 victory. Captain Matton was the outstanding feature of this meet, taking three first places and tying Ruff for first in the 100-yard dash, making a total of 19 points. Farrar came next, with two first places, making a total of 10 points. In fact, all thirteen first places were taken by Trinity men. Those winning "T's" in this meet were Ruff, Cordle, Coman, Garriss, and Raper.

The second meet of the season was held April 15th, on the local track, with the team representing Wake Forest. This also resulted in an overwhelming victory to the credit of the Trinity team, the score being 80 to 37 in our favor. In this meet all except two of the first places in the twelve events were taken by Trinity men. Captain Matton, as usual, was the outstanding feature for our team, making a total of 16 points, by taking three first places and one third place. Farrar and Ruff came next, with two firsts each. Other Trinity men winning first places were Lewis, Coman, Brown, and Goforth. In this meet Lewis was the winner of a coveted "T."

The next track meet in which Trinity took part was the annual State Meet, which was held May 3rd, 1915, on the local track, Trinity, Wake Forest, Carolina, and A. and M. competing. This was the first time that this important event had ever been held here, and naturally it attracted much interest both within and without the whole community. Determined to make up for the bad show made in the 1914 State Meet, in which it took last place, the team worked diligently and won for itself and for Trinity second place. The strong team from Carolina walked away with first place. A. and M. came third, and Wake Forest last. The distribution of points was as follows: Carolina 65, Trinity 40, A. and M. 35, and Wake Forest 14. Farrar won the largest number of any Trinity man, piling up a total of 10 points. Captain Matton came next in the number of points scored for Trinity, making a total of 9. Ruff and Cordle also did good work for Trinity.

The list of events, and the winners and their records are as follows:

100-YARD DASH—Johnson, of Carolina; Byrd, of Wake Forest; Ruff, of Trinity; Potter, of A. & M. Time, 10 2-5 seconds.

The State Cross-Country Race 1915

¬HE first intercollegiate cross-country run in North Carolina was held at Chapel Hill, November 20, 1915, when teams representing the University, A. & M., Wake Forest, and Trinity, ran the required four miles. Although Carolina men won the first two places, A. and M. won the race; three members of that team crossing the line in third, fourth, and fifth places. According to the rules, the first place in the meet was to go to the college the first three of whose runners scored the least number of points counted according as they finished. Upchurch of Carolina came in first in 22 minutes, 21 1-5 seconds. The other runners finished in the following order: Rand, of Carolina; Goodson, Johnson, Millwee, and Scott, of A. and M.; Newton, Coman, Osborne, of Trinity; Turner, of A. and M.; Nims, of Carolina; Noblett, of Trinity; Smith and Childress, of Wake Forest; and Barber, of Carolina. The teams stood in the following order: A. and M., 12 points; Carolina, 14 points; Trinity, 24 points; Wake Forest, 27 points. The race started at the postoffice in Chapel Hill, and extended out two miles on the Durham road and back to the starting place. The Trinity team made a very creditable showing. The team was composed of Coman, Newton, Osborne, and Noblett.

The 1915 Baseball Season

T

HOSE who predicted a strong team for Trinity last season under Coach West, Captain Maddox, and Manager Downey, were not disappointed. Out of the eighteen games played, Trinity won eight, tied one, and lost nine. This summary does not measure up by any means to the quality of the team. It was one that every Trinity man could well be proud of. The uphill fights it put up, the spectacular comebacks it made in several games, and the spirit of true sportsmanship constantly displayed earned for the team the great amount of praise which it received.

By a 6-2 victory over the University of Vermont on March 24th, the season was opened and the new Hanes Athletic Field was dedicated. Featuring in this game were the gilt-edge hurling of "Dinah" Kanipe and the hitting of Thorne, Maddox, and Love. The next game was lost, 4-1, to Lafayette. The batting of Love and fast fielding of Bost featured. Then came the downing of the Amherst boys by the easy score of 7-1. Earnhardt, Trinity's Freshman pitcher, was exceedingly stingy with his hits.

Perhaps the most interesting game of the season was the one with the strong team from Pennsylvania State College, which the latter won by the close score of 2-1. On account of a steady drizzle of rain, the game was called in the seventh inning. Powell, on the mound for Trinity, made an excellent showing. Thorne made some spectacular catches in center field. The weather was unfavorable in a number of early games. The annual Easter contest with A. and M. had to be cancelled on account of deep snow.

Ragged playing of the whole Trinity team and timely hitting of the Weaver College boys, gave the latter a slow game by the score of 8-4. Next came the defeat of the old rival, Wake Forest, 4-3. "Dinzh" Kanipe held the opposing batters down to two hits, struck out seven men, and failed to walk a single man. Captain Maddox drove in the winning run with a two-base smash to left. Siler hit safely three out of four times up.

The first game away from home was with A. and M., in Raleigh. With the star pitcher, Jaynes, allowing but two hits in the first seven innings, and with a four-run lead against them, the Trinity boys looked as if they were beaten. When there were two cuts and two strikes against him, Durham started the rally in the eighth inning, with a single to right. In this eighth frame five straight hits were garnered off Jaynes' delivery, with the result that Trinity tied the score. By agreement in the tenth inning, the game was called without either side's being able to score.

The game with the University of Virginia on the Hanes Field started off with seven runs for the visitors in the first inning, and three for Trinity in their half of the same frame. The final score was 10-6. The next three games were unmarked by strange features. Trinity won from Richmond College, 6-1, lost to Wake Forest at Wake Forest, 7-6, and won from Georgia, 8-2.

Perhaps the most satisfactory game of the season to the Trinity community as a whole was the deciding contest of the series of three with Wake Forest. This game was won at the East Durham Park by the score of 8-5. It was a steady, hard-fought struggle, marked by fast fielding on both sides. Flythe and Durham pulled off spectacular running catches.

The final game on the home grounds was a walkover victory from the University of South Carolina. The slugging of the entire team, especially of Flythe and Thorne, piled up a score of 18-5.

The northern trip resulted in one victory and five defeats for the Trinity team. The most interesting of these games was the one with Roanoke, a pitcher's battle, in which a triple in the second inning gave the Roanoke team a 1-0 victory. Powell allowed only three scattered hits; Tiffany allowed four. V. M. I. was defeated 7-1; with the second game a rainstorm interfered in the third inning, when Trinity was in the lead. The games with the University of Virginia and V. P. I. were lost by scores at least respectable for the defeated.

On the whole, it was a good season. The record was not spectacular, but it is quite as good as the average of Southern colleges. The team deserved and received the hearty support of practically every student in Trinity College.

Baseball Personals

DURHAM

NYONE who has seen John Durham performing around third base can readily understand why he has long been regarded as the steadiest man on the Trinity infield. With him as Captain this coming season, it is safe to predict that the team will be run as it should be. Although he doesn't always break into the headlines as a thrill producer, his work day in and day out has been so consistently good that his presence on the field is invaluable. Everyone likes to see John on third, and there's a reason.

COACH WEST

"C RIP" WEST, a baseball luminary of other days, was coach for the first time the season of 1915, and his work bears with season of 1915, and his work bears witness to the fact that he hasn't forgotten the game since the days when he was so voracious about everything that came towards shortstop. "Crip" made good in every sense of the word. He combines in himself three elements that together are unbeatable—ability, energy, and wide-awakeness.

FEW

BEN FEW made his letter last year by good work in right field, where he alternated with Carver. He won the right to wear the "T" by hard and long-continued work; and in so doing, he showed the stuff that men are made of. As a general utility player, he has rendered valuable assistance to the team.

FLYTHE

A LLEN FLYTHE broke into college and into the team simultaneously last year. From the first he has been the hardest and most consistent slugger on the team, and his fielding is of an equally high order. Whether at first base or in the outfield he takes what comes in his direction without hesitation or error.

RONE

R ONE was understudy for Maddox last season, and was prevented from taking part in many of the games. "Yannigan" knows the game, however, hits like a leaguer, and can throw as well, and when he becomes a regular, Trinity can rest assured that his work will be done well.

POWELL

"B ILL" POWELL has served two years as a member of the pitching staff, and he has always had the stuff. Although some unkind fate seems to object to his winning many games, it cannot prevent his pitching good ball. The games he dropped last year were all by such close scores as to prove that only a hoodoo is responsible.

LOVE

"R AB" LOVE is also a first-year man on the team, and like Flythe, he pounds the ball hard and often. He had an especial fondness for lining out a home-run or a three-bagger whenever it would worry the opposing team. His playing at shortstop was such as to justify the prophecy that in the future he will be one of the all-round standbys of the team.

EARNHARDT

NEXT to Kanipe, George Earnhardt was on the mound the greatest number of games last year. Starting out strong by defeating Amherst early in the season, he kept up the good work till the walkover with South Carolina in the late spring. Earnhardt has a great future in store for him on the Hanes Field.

CAPTAIN MADDOX

A BOUT half of the offensive and defensive power of the Trinity team was concentrated in this capable backstop, and right nobly did he perform. He hammered the ball around all over the lot, swung on to all that came his way, shot then, down to second like a streak of lightning, and was a regular barb-wire entanglement in the way of thoso who tried to steal home. Trinity at some distant time may have had a better catcher than "Frosty," but nobody remembers who it was.

MANAGER DOWNEY

OF course the manager usually has more real work to do than anyone connected with the team, and Tom Downey performed his part with considerable credit to himself. His arrangement of the schedule, and his handling of the finances both showed the high-class business ability he possessed.

THE OTHER OLD TIMERS

S PACE fails in the attempt adequately to sing the praises of Dinah Kanipe, Beal Siler, Shag Thorne, Gordon Carver, and Squee Bost, mighty men all, who have left the campus. The team this year will do great things, of that everyone is sure, but the day will not soon come when Trinity rooters forget the names and achievements of the departed stars of the 1915 team. Of that number four were Seniors and one was a Freshman. From the longest to the shortest, the oldest to the youngest, they were all strong players and gentlemen, and their memory will long linger around the campus.

The Coming Season

ASEBALL at Trinity received a blow last June which caused many to shake their heads and have visions of a long string of defeats. Five men, all stars, left college for the last time when school closed on last year's class. The clouds were driven and scattered all over the sky by September, however, when the greatest assortment of material in the history of the college stood knocking at the doors. They were admitted with open arms—a crop of pitchers, catchers, infielders and outfielders, base-runners, and home-run swatters, utility men and water-boys. What looks like one of the best teams in the State is now being manufactured by the capable fingers of Coach West, and the drooping feathers of the Trinity roosters are swelling and puffing like the tail of a peacock. It is of course too early yet, in the early spring before the first game is in sight, to frame up a list of the season's regulars. There will be slumps and surprises, and the truth of the statement, "You never can tell," will again be demonstrated. With prospects as they are, however, we face the future with a light heart.

The schedule of the 1916 team is the best in recent years, and probably the best ever arranged by a Trinity manager. The games to be played are the following:

Football

campus, the next best thing may be to have it in the Trinity annual.

 $lap{W}_{\!\!K}$ OR the benefit of those unfamiliar with the facts in the case who may wonder why such a good college as Trinity should be without such a good game as football, and to give the exact history of a phase of the past of Trinity College that is perhaps hazy in the minds of many, this sketch of the game as it was and was not has been written. The material was found chiefly in the files of The Archive in the college library. Since we cannot have football on the Trinity

For over twenty years Trinity College has not put out a team in this popular form of athletics. At an earlier date the game flourished here, and one year the success was so great that the championship of the South was claimed. The earliest mention of football in any of the Archives in the library is in Volume V, published in the school year 1891-Many pages of the December number are devoted to singing the praises of the team. On November 14, 1891, the team went down to Columbia, South Carolina, and beat Furman University by the modest score of 96 to 0. That same week, on November 20, the team went over to Chapel Hill and won, 6 to 4. The Archive says: "Although the University boys played a strong game, yet the teams were perhaps not quite so evenly matched as the score would lead one to suppose. There was time only for two thirtyminute halves, and both times when time was called our team was very near the goal line and in possession of the ball, one time being only ten yards; at the other, only five. team was treated royally by the University boys, and although it was on their own grounds and in their own midst, the visiting team was treated with every courtesy and consideration, and every attempt was made to put them at their ease. . . . The ball changes hands several times; finally Trinity gets it again, and by steady rushing, clean running behind good blocking, nears the University goal, and Avery makes a touchdown, from which Durham kicks goal. . . . The game was an enjoyable one, from its absence of slugging and foul play."

Still more exultant is the account in the same number of The Archive of the victory over the University of Virginia team by an even larger score, 20 to 0: "The great game of the South has been played. . . . North Carolina has defeated Virginia, as well as South Carolina, and claims the championship of the South. All arrangements were perfected before the teams reached Richmond, and the game, being well advertised, was largely attended, there being not less than 1,200 people present. Notwithstanding their gentlemanly conduct and good playing last year, the wearers of the 'modest navy blue' were lost amid the large number of Virginia supporters who wore the brilliant orange and black. However, before the game was half over, it could be seen that our boys were fast winning friends; for not only did the number of people wearing blue ribbon appear larger, but their lusty cheers of encouragement became more and more powerful till it swelled into a grand chorus of victory that was well-nigh deafening to all save Trinity adherents, to whom, indeed, it was one sweet chord of harmony. . . . It would be useless to try to say who did the playing for Trinity. They all did it. It was team work that won. But we must credit Damels, Plyler, Davis and Durham, S., for some magnificent plays that gained them merited prominence. . . . After the game the two teams lustily cheered each other, and the umpire and referee, and parted the best of friends." The Trinity line-up in that classic game was: Left end, McDowell; left tackle, Plyler; left guard, Caviness; center, Whitaker; right guard, Avery; right tackle, Davis; right end, Durham, P.; quarterback, Harper; right halfback, Daniels, captain; left halfback, Durham, S., and fullback, Durham, R.

In spite of the victories, however, the season of 1891 was not altogether perfect. In the same December number of The Archive occur a few lines of painful significance: "Expenses this season have been three hundred dollars above receipts. This is more than the team cught to bear. Contributions from Trinity's well-wishers, sent to C. E. Turner, manager, will, therefore, be highly appreciated, and will insure the existence of a team next year, which otherwise is somewhat doubtful." Evidently that financial cure-all, the compulsory athletic fee, was not in existence in those early days.

Notwithstanding the debt, the high spirits of the players did not droop. The Archive for January, 1892, records a banquet given the team, several members of the faculty, and other invited guests by Captain Daniels and Professor Bandy. After extensive feasting, speeches were made by almost all present, and everybody went home happy.

The next year there was a slump. The enthusiastic football player and future distinguished author, Isaac Erwin Avery, at that time editor of The Archive, has this to say: "We should not be dispirited or discouraged because of our recent defeat at football.

. . Last year we had the championship team of the South; this year the better part of that team was absent.

. . Everything considered, our men deserve far more credit and did far better playing than the scores seem to indicate

. . . and feel certain that next season we can unfurl our one-time victorious banner with a decided assurance of success in nearly all our games."

The season of 1893 was only moderately successful and was marred by disputes with other institutions. Trinity had the pleasure of beating Wake Forest 12 to 6, the University of Tennessee 70 to 0, and the University of North Carolina 6 to 4. With the latter there was a bitter misunderstanding over the schedule. In the game with the University of Virginia, after being beaten 30 to 0 in the first half, the Trinity team left the field on account of unfair officials.

In The Archive for November, 1893, appears an anonymous bit of doggerel which, despite its deficiencies as literature, may be commended as expressing the old pep. Its title is "A Girl on Football." As a sample here are two stanzas:

"A girl is not allowed to play football
And to revel in the delights of a game.
It is only for boys, large, strong, and tall
To win for themselves glory and fame.

But though we do not choose to play,

We can shout and wear the blue

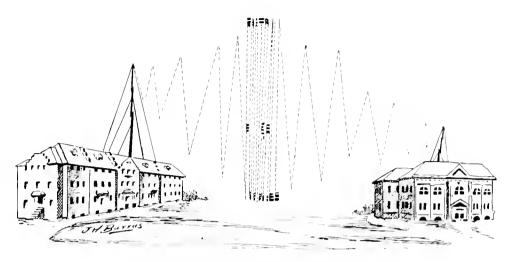

And be able from the depths of our hearts to say,

To Trinity we'll always be loyal and true."

As early as 1893 there were rumblings of the coming storm that was to sweep football from the college.

An editorial in The Archive for December, 1893, begins in this manner: "The reports of the North Carolina Conferences show that those honorable bodies are opposed to football. They array themselves against the trustees, the faculty, and the students of Trinity College by their would-be 'kindest cut of all.' The Western North Carolina Conference even passed a clause withholding from Trinity the contributions of Western North Carolinians if we play football another year. . . . Assuming the report to be true, we have a few remarks to make, meaning no offense whatever to that body of friends which we so much respect." The editor then proceeds to wield the club vigorously.

In the Athletic Department of The Archive for October, 1893, is found the following spirited polemic, by one who signs himself "The Casual Observer:" "In spite of a great deal of opposition, football has still survived in our colleges as one of the principal features of amusement. It may be a 'brutal, ungentlemanly, immoral game' and 'one that encourages indolence and vice,' yet for some inexplicable reason it has assumed a more paramount position than ever before in all the Northern colleges, and is rapidly being introduced throughout the entire South and West. And it is not, as has been charged by its enemies, encouraged primarily by the 'rougher element;' the trustees and the faculties are the prime movers in its introduction in almost every instance. Is it not strange that these men, who spend the greater part of their lives in seeking wholesome. beneficial methods of mental development, do not protest against the playing of this game if it is as vicious and degrading as represented by some? Bah! they could explain the situation if they liked. They realize how very much its good effects outweigh its evil influences; they know that it is a wonderful factor in attaining the desired culmination— 'Sano mens in sano corpore.' It is only those men that stand aloof from college circles and draw the remembrances of youth and vigor in dyspeptic, unsympathizing pessimism that bitterly and unreasonably oppose college athletics in general and football in particular."

SHUT ONE EYE AND HOLD PAGE ON A PLANE WITH THE EYE

The Archive for November, 1895, starts off an explanation in this manner: "Doubtless many will like to know why we, who have been such loyal supporters in the past, have not put out a team this season." The entire discussion of football in The Archive is closed briefly in the number for November, 1896: "Trinity has altogether ceased playing football and it may be well that she has."

The attitude of the college authorities toward the game is stated in the catalogue of 1895-1896: "This game has grown to be such an evil that the best tastes of the public have rebelled against it. The authorities of the college have watched it with interest, and after several years of experience and observation, they have determined that the best interests of the students demand that it be discontinued, especially as a game for intercollegiate contest. If students wish to play football as a matter of pure recreation, no objection will be raised, but under no condition will a match game with another college be allowed."

The last mention of the game is made in the catalogue of 1912-1913. In speaking of the Hanes Athletic Field, it says: "The field is enclosed and affords ample room for baseball, football, and field and track athletics." Since that time the catalogue has ignored the fact of the game's existence.

In the fall of 1914, as many members of the present student body well remember, there was great enthusiasm on the campus for the reinstatement of the game. The students had a great parade, held a mass-meeting, started—and stopped—organizing class teams, formed a Football Club, and, in fact, moved heaven and earth. The Trustees of the college at their meeting in June were presented a petition signed by practically the whole student body, supported by many of the alumni, urging that football be reinstated at Trinity. Nothing came of the effort, and since that time, except for an occasional yell, the spirit has lain dormant.

If the students of Trinity College really wanted to get back football, it seems in the humble judgment of the chronicler that something might yet be done. There are various college traditions and special days that are celebrated every year. It might become a tradition of Trinity College that every year, useless as it might appear, a petition should quietly and respectfully be submitted to the Trustees begging that the ancient and honorable game of football be permitted once more on the fair campus of our alma mater. In the Bible is the parable of the unjust judge who, because of a woman's importunity, granted her request; and there is an old proverb that the continuous dropping of water will wear away stone. Without comparing our beloved Trustees to either unjust judges or to stones, it might be said that persistence might hope some day to be rewarded.

Varsity Tennis

PHE elimination of Class Tennis this year only added to the interest which was manifested in the Varsity Tournament. Manager Anderson got busy from the start and arranged a schedule of three matches on the home courts. The Trinity team won every match in which it played and has a strong bid for the State, and possibly for the South Atlantic Championship. The Varsity Tennis Tournaments resulted as follows: Lambeth won from Young by the score of 1-6, 6-2, 7-5; Wallace defeated Larkin 6-3 6-4; Wallace triumphed over Glaze 6-3, 6-2; Lambeth won from Alderman by the score of 6-1, 6-2; Young defeated Parker 6-2, 6-1. In the final round of the tournament, Lambeth defeated Wallace and won a position as team-mate to Captain Anderson by the score of 6-2, 6-2, leaving Wallace and Young to contest for the place of alternate. The latter won by the score of 6-3, 4-6, and 6-3.

TRINITY-RANDOLPH-MACON

The first match of the season took place on October twenty-third, when Trinity won over Randolph-Macon College. Composing the Trinity team were Captain A. R. Anderson, J. W. Lambeth, Jr., and J. W. Wallace; while J. O. W. Graverly and H. K. Smith constituted the Randolph-Macon team. The match consisted of doubles between Anderson and Wallace for Trinity, and Graverly and Smith for Randoph-Macon; and singles between Anderson and Smith, and Lambeth and Graverly. In both doubles and singles, Trinity came out victorious. The doubles were won by the score of 6-2, 6-4, and the singles came out 6-1, 3-6, and 6-4; and 7-5, 6-1, respectively.

Trinity-Elon

On October twenty-seventh, Trinity triumphed over Elon in the second intercollegiate Tennis match of the season. The match was void of any particular and unusual interest, all four players being seemingly unable to play with the proper amount of "pep." In the doubles, H. S. Hardcastle and S. T. Holland, the Elon representatives, opposed

Captain Anderson and Lambeth of Trinity, the latter team winning by the score of 6-2, 7-5. The singles were also won by Trinity. Anderson defeated Hardcastle 6-2, 6-4, and Lambeth came out victorious over Holland 7-5, 6-2. The singles were much more interesting than the doubles.

TRINITY-CAROLINA

The last match of the season and the second match between Trinity and Carolina took place on the local court on November twelfth and thirteenth, the doubles being played on the twelfth, and the singles on the following day. Since this is the only form of athletics in which Trinity has any relation with Carolina, unusual enthusiasm was manifested. The fast and interesting match resulted in the defeat of the team representing the University of North Carolina in the doubles and the splitting of the singles. doubles, Trinity, represented by Captain Anderson and Lambeth, was victorious over the Carolina team, composed of W. J. Capehart and Alva Combs, by the scores of 11-9, 4-6, and 6-0. In the first set Carolina won the first three games, but Trinity, by excellent team-work, overcame the lead and in probably the fastest tennis ever seen on the local courts, won the set. The principal feature of the match was probably the come-back of the Trinity team and the whirlwind finish in the final set, which resulted in the defeat of the visitors by the score of 6-0. Captain Anderson was in unusually good form, and bis hard serve, lightning foot-work, good judgment, and powerful back-hand stroke called forth the applause of the spectators time after time. The playing of Lambeth was also of high order, and it was due to his terrific smashes that many of the points were won by Trinity. The playing of the Carolina team was also good, and especially noteworthy was the work of Capehart. On the following day, the singles, which were equally as interesting as the doubles, were split. Lambeth was defeated by Combs, 4-6, 4-6, while Anderson was victorious over Capehart, 6-2, 6-2.

TENNIS PERSONALS

The efficiency of Manager Jesse Anderson is shown in his schedule, the most successful ever arranged by a Trinity tennis manager. The players were quite up to the high personal standard set by the manager. Captain "Ram" Anderson has figured in four years of Varsity tennis, won the South Atlantic Intercollegiate Singles Championship, and thereby linked his name with those of the immortals. Lambeth, playing his first year as a regular on the Varsity, proved a worthy mate to the veteran Anderson. The alternate, Young, did not play in any matches, but his work in practice warrants the prediction that he will be a strong man next year.

We'll ride Wake Forest on a rail, on a rail,
We'll ride Wake Forest on rail.
On a rail, on a rail,
We'll ride Wake Forest on rail.
(Repeat ad infinitum.)

He's the boy that crimps the ball upon the bean. He's the boy that puts it where it can't be seen, He's the boy that slams the sphere To the middle of next year, He's the boy that crimps the ball upon the bean.

Basketball Personals

"R AM" ANDERSON, who is this year playing his third year on the Varsity, is one of the fastest and best all-round forwards in the State. His consistent playing and lightning shots have made him the hero of many a hard-fought basketball game, and caused basketball enthusiasts to look to his goal-shooting as a matter of course.

"S KIN" FERRELL broke into the Varsity limelight this year, after playing three years of sensational class basketball. "Skin" is little, but his size in no way affects his ability to play basketball, and he has become the terror of many a good guard. In addition to winning his letter in basketball, he is the manager of the baseball team, and one of the best all-round men on "the Park."

SWAN played two years of class ball and sprang into prominence as a Varsity man when he pocketed the ball eight times against Elon. Since then, he has been playing consistently and is to be depended upon when either of the two regular forwards, Anderson and Ferrell, is out of the game.

"C HICK" MATTON, sub-forward, after holding every position and doing everything to be done on the track team, came to the Varsity from the famous Senior Club of 1915-16. He is quick, very active, and is a good man to have in the game.

R ICHARDSON, sub-forward, has gained the well-deserved reputation of being a basketball player of no mean ability. "Rich" is always on the job and can be depended upon to do his share in any game.

"MEASE" MAYES, Bunting's understudy at center, made the northern trip, and although he has as yet played in but two Varsity games, he gave a good account of himself when called upon.

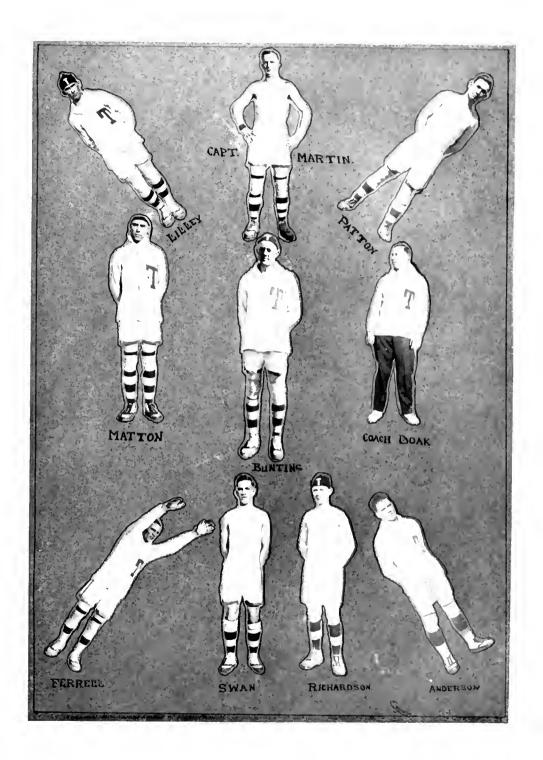

"S WEDE" LILLEY, who holds down the position of right guard on the team, is as much as his nickname indicates—a Swede artist not to be neglected. Lilly is a hard worker and a sure guard. His guarding has been one of the outstanding features of the team and has given him a good reputation as a basketball player.

"PANIC" PATTON is playing his first year on the Varsity and has proven his worth as a basketball guard. He is very steady and knows the game from every angle. "Panic" has made the team an excellent guard, one who can be relied upon to be in the game from start to finish.

"Baby" BUNTING has probably made more improvement in the last three years than any man on the squad. In his Freshman year he could not get a show at the class team; in his Senior year he makes the Varsity, and he puts up a strong game, too. "Baby" has size, weight, and the ability to use those endowments to the best advantage. He has gone up against some of the best centers in this part of the country, and has held his own.

MANAGER SECREST

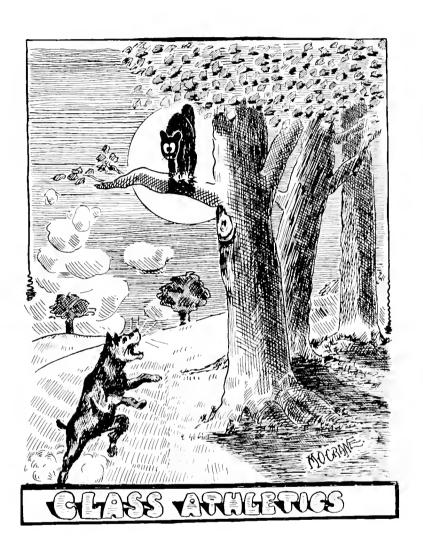

"RIP" SECREST is the man who has had to bear the brunt of the work in connection with the basketball team. However, his efforts have not gone unnoticed, for his schedule was well arranged and was one of the most attractive that has been here in many seasons. Secrest has made good not only as a manager, but also in various other forms of college activities. He is a man of many qualities, none of which have shown to better advantage than those pertaining to his managerial ability.

CAPTAIN MARTIN

"HIP" MARTIN, who made such a brilliant record on last year's Varsity, was elected Captain of the team this year—an honor which comes to but few men who have been in college but three years. However, "Hip" is not of the mediocre sort and has the ability to handle any basketball team. His guarding is of the scoreless kind, and his policy in goal-shooting is to get double the number of his opponent. In fact, "Hip" is such a star that he may well be mentioned as Captain of the All-State team.

COACH DOAK

"Bob" Doak is serving his first year as the team's pilot, and his services have been manifold. Doak's reputation as coach is well known throughout South Atlantic athletic circles, owing to his varied career. He is an athlete of many sports—chief of which is basketball. His team at Elon last year was the best claimant to the State Championship, all of which was due to the expert way in which he handled it. In addition to all this, he is well liked among the boys, and his popularity on the campus is an asset to be despised by no one. It is to be hoped that "Bob" will see many more years of service as Trinity's basketball coach.

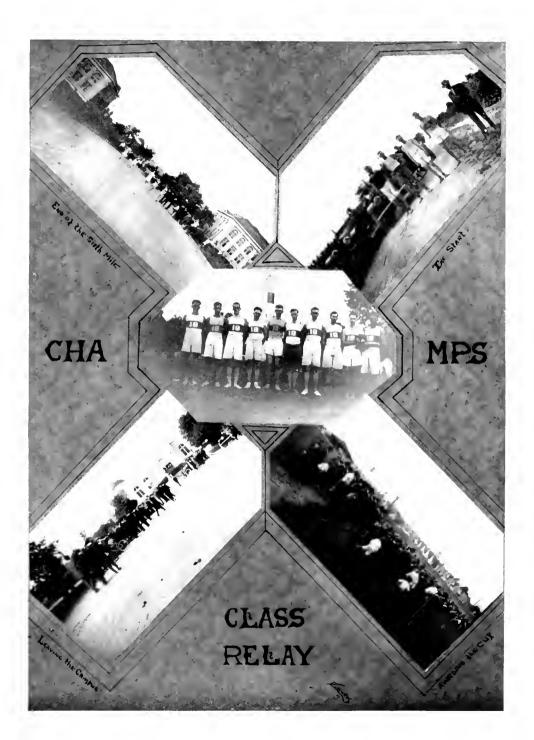

Interclass Relay Race 1915

In the sixth annual relay race held at Trinity, the Sophomore team won first place, the Seniors came in a close second, the Juniors finished third, and the Freshmen brought up the rear. The race was one of the closest and most exciting ever seen here since the relay race was made an annual institution in the college six years ago. The time of the winning team for the whole ten miles was 55:32,4.

The order in which the runners finished up at each mile is as follows:

FIRST MILE—Smathers, Freshman; Osborne, Senior; Richardson, Sophomore; Bunn, Junior, Second Mile—Hoyle, Senior; Loftin, Freshman; Bradsher, Junior; Hackney, Sophomore. Third Mile—Saunders, Sophomore; LeGrand, Junior; Wilson, Freshman; Snow, Senior. Fourth Mile—Leffer, Freshman; Martin, Junior; Gwyn, Sophomore; Lilley, Senior. Fifth Mile—Mayes, Junior; Harrell, Freshman; Brown, Senior; Giles, Sophomore. Sixth Mile—Cunningham, Junior; Tabor, Freshman; Matton, Senior; Murphy, Sophomore. Seventh Mile—Smith, Junior; Brown, Senior; Harris, Sophomore; Lambe, Freshman. Eighth Mile—Merritt, Sophomore; Phillips, Junior; Grigg, Senior; Wrenn, Freshman. Ninth Mile—Lewis, Sophomore; Newton, Senior; Scott, Junior; Toms, Freshman. Tenth Mile—Garriss, Sophomore; Coman, Senior; West, Junior; Noblett, Freshman.

Interclass Track Meet 1915

THE Class of 1918 won the annual inter-class field day meet, which took place on Haynes Athletic Field, March 19, 1915, and received the much coveted silver trophy cup, which is given each year by the "TOMBS" to the team scoring the most The winning score was 57 points, and the other teams came in the following order: Juniors, 30; Sophomores, 11; Post-Graduates, 9; and Seniors, 3. On account of the intense cold and the wind, the runners were unable to make any good records; but taken as a whole, the events were run off in first-class order. The Freshman team showed up particularly well and won either first or second place in almost every event. Coman, of the Junior team, led the field in points scored, winning thirteen points for his team, while Ruff, of the Sophomore team, and Raper, of the Freshman team, followed with ten points each. The list of events, the winners, and the records are as follows:

Interclass Baseball

HE closest and most successful series ever held for the Faculty Interclass Baseball Cup since the establishment of the fall games in 1913, resulted in victory for the Freshman team. The deciding game was the third of the post-season games in playing off the tie with the Sophomores. The contest was full of interest throughout and the showing made by all the teams was more than ordinary. The contest narrowed itself down by first eliminating the Seniors, and then the Juniors, until the race fell to the Sophomores and Freshmen. The first game between the two resulted in a 2-2 score, and the second was played until darkness, only to be called when the score was 6-6. The third, however, on October 18, 1915, went to the Freshmen by the score of 2-1, when Holloway made a spectacular catch in the ninth inning with three men on bases. This marked the close of the series, and the Freshman team received the handsome silver loving cup to be kept until some other team is able to take it from them.

The Freshman team was composed of the following men: Pitchers, Captain Mason, Ellis, Lambe, Minshew; catcher, Lefler: first baseman, Beal; second baseman, Carver; shortstop, Langley; third baseman, T. M. Wannamaker; outfielders, Clayton, Holloway, McCutcheon, Toms, F. M. Wannamaker, Wrenn.

Interclass Basketball 1915-16

N the annual class basketball series of 1915, the Senior team won the championship banner after a hard fight with the Sophomores, who finished up a close second. The Junior team came out third, while the Freshmen finished on the bottom.

The series was one of the most interesting ever seen here, and one extra game had to be played for the purpose of deciding the class champions, the Sophomores and Seniors being tied for first place. In this game the Seniors were overwhelmingly victorious by the score of 39-11, and the championship banner was awarded by Professor R. N. Wilson to F. C. Patton, pilot of the successful Seniors.

The standing of the teams at the close of the season was as follows:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Seniors	6	1	.858
Sophomores	5	2	.716
Juniors	2	4	.333
Freshmen	0	6	.000

The Songs of the Sons

By Plato Durham

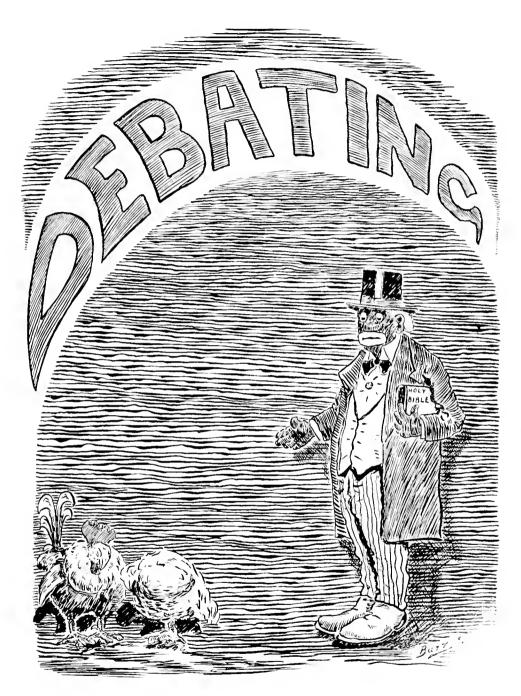

(Tune: "Maryland, My Maryland")

O'er scarred and worn but unafraid,
Trinity, my Trinity.

I rest me in thy quiet shade,
Trinity, my Trinity.
To count again Love's golden store,
To glean the morning fields once more,
To dream the fair, sweet dreams of yore,
Trinity, my Trinity.

Thy grave and golden sunset bell
Trinity, fair Trinity,
Has wrought again its golden spell,
Trinity, fair Trinity;
Mine eyes are veiled in mist of tears
As from the far beloved years
The splendid vision reappears,
Trinity, fair Trinity.

Speak thou again the masterword,
Trinity, brave Trinity,
Regird me with thy master-sword,
Trinity, brave Trinity;
Where Truth's brave battle-splendors shine
Look thou for all the sons of thine
Along her foremost battle-line,
Trinity, brave Trinity.

TO OLD K. A. (Tune: Watch on the Rhine).

The day is done, the afterglow That paints the heavens seems to show How dear to God our colors bold, Who flaunts the Crimson and the Gold.

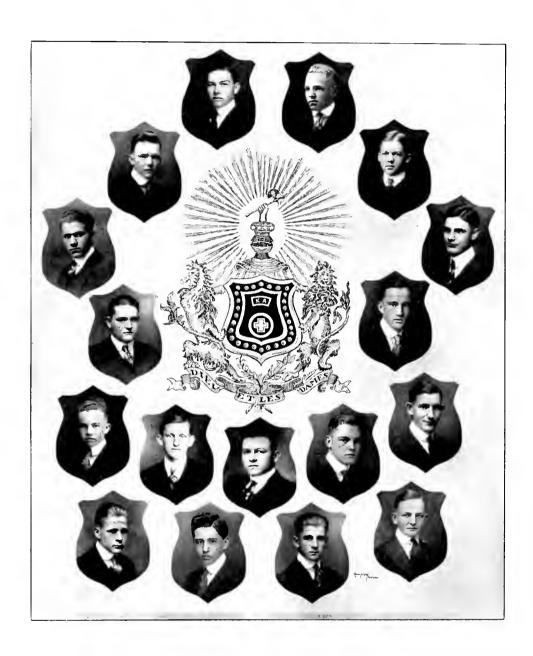

CHORUS

Then gather 'round, ye brothers all, In every well-loved Chapter Hall, And fill your glasses high at close of day; Raise your stein, and clink with mine To old K. A.

> Then let our thoughs in fancy rove To sunny Southern girls we love; Then lift our glasses as we stand And drink to grand old Dixie land.

CHORUS

To every brother lift our song, May days be bright and life be long; And may his heart beat true for aye To guard the honor of K. A.

Hail to Thee, O Kappa Sigma

Hail to thee, O Kappa Sigma!

Hail the Scarlet, Green and White.
With its many wondrous teachings,

With its jewels gleaming bright!
As the European order

Flourished near and far,
May we modern Kappas ever

With our Crescent and our Star.

Hail to thee, O Kappa Sigma!
Hold our willing fealty.
May "Bononia Docet" guide us
E'er in faith and loyalty.
Raise aloft on high our standard,
On caressing winds unfurled;
May our banner wave forever
"Cross the guerdons of the world!

Pi Kappa Alpha

TO PLKAPPA ALPHA

O come, let us sing from the depths of our souls,

To Pi Kappa Alpha our deepest devotion.

Till borne on the winds, as the thunder peal rolls,

Its glad notes shall echo from ocean to ocean.

Firm champion of truth, and guardian of youth,

Cf thy towering greatness thy manhood gives proof.

All hail, noble order, beloved of old!

Long wave thy bright colors, pure Garnet and Gold!

Enrolled as thy knights, with thy banner above.

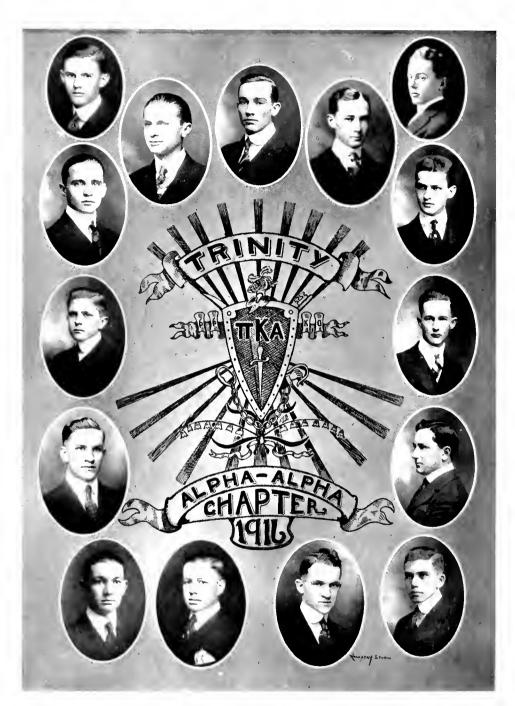

We are constantly arising by manly endeavor.

To the heights of thy ideals, true friendship and love,
Which never can die, but live on forever.

So through all the days, over life's toilsome ways,
The light of thy friendship shines clear through the haze:
What a wealth of real meaning thy emblem imparts—
The Shield and the Diamond worn over our hearts!

What is this that we hear over valley and plain?

A sound of sweet voices in harmony ringing.
This the chorus of sisters in joyful refrain,
The deeds and the praises of gallant knights singing.
As we look up on high to the great Father Pi,
That glorious ensign appears in the sky.
May it blended in beauty with old glory wave
"O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

SIGMA CHI NATIONAL HYMN

Hail to the blue and gold,
Our colors fair unfold;
Hail, brothers, hail.
The cross of Sigma Chi,
Our emblem lift on high,
To float 'neath freedom's sky
On ev'ry gale.

From far East classic shades,
New England's hills and glades
The white cross glows
To where the stately hills
Eternal sunshine falls,
And bloom by mountain walls
Lily and rose.

From land of oak and pine,
Magnolia flow'r and vine,
From Dixieland,
Comes on the south sea gales,
From Mississippi's dales,
O'er old Virginia's vales,
A chorus grand.

SORORITY

(Tune: "Annie Laurie")

We love our dear sorority,
With love that's deep and true,
And each heart beneath the diamond
Beats for the White and Blue;
Our spotless White and Blue,
That e'er shall wave on high,
We'll all be loyal ever
To Alpha Delta Pi.

In this frat that we all honor
How happy every one.
Who has joined this chain of friendship
And shares its love and fun.
And noble are our aims,
Ambitions always high;
We shall always love and cherish
Our dear Alpha Delta Pt.

Kappa Delta Song

THAT DEAR NAME (Tune: "Maryland")

By that dear name we hold apart Large written on each loyal heart, We look across the years to see The steadfast light that shines in thee. Oh, may no evil stain thy rose, No tempest shake thy love's repose, No cloud obscure thy light that glows Around the lives made one in thee.

We place the diamond shield we wear Beneath thy stronger shield of prayer; While love shall call and honor stand, While heart needs heart and hand aids hand. Thy truth we never can forget Thy sun that rose shall never set, For God who gave shall guard thee yet, Our dear K. D., our own K. D.

SYMPHONY

These things within thine heart hold dear—Purity, justice, truth, and love,
Seek there truly and thou shalt find
They lead to the throne of God above.
Dost thou wear the sacred shield of gold?
Then seek out the violet white,
Let its pure and modest face upturned
Guide thee ever to truth and right.
Themis for thee a guardian is
Of the noble, the fair, the just.
Seek the noblest and that pursue,
And in Themis for aye put thy trust.

Kind Reader

Here followeth a conglomeration of odds and ends which cannot be classified. Look it over and name it for yourself

An Explanation

F necessity the Editors were forced to turn down many of the contributions, poetry and prose, jokes and pictures, which were turned in. It is impossible to give to all an acceptable excuse for this lack of appreciation for their productions. The nearest thing to a gentle explanation of the matter is the following quotation, copied from a paper. It is the formula used by a certain tactful Chinese editor to ward off the knives of disappointed friends.

"Illustrious brother of the sun and moon: Behold thy servant prostrate before thy feet. I bow to thee and beg of thy graciousness thou mayst grant that I may speak and live. Thy honored manuscript has deigned to cast the light of its august countenance upon us. With raptures we have perused it. By the bones of our ancestors, never have I encountered such wit, such pathos, such lofty thought. With fear and trembling I return the writing. Were I to publish the treasure you sent me, the emperor would order that it should be made the standard, and that none be published except such as equaled it. Knowing literature as I do, and that it would be impossible in ten thousand years to equal what you have done, I send your writing back. Ten thousand times I crave your pardon. Behold my head is at your feet. Do what you will. Your servant's servant, The Editor."

To all the above the Editors of The Chanticleer say ditto.

"Who Wet 'Dean' Hunt?"

BY W. R. SHELTON.

VERY campus has its traditions. There is no fixed category for such traditions, for they come down from freshman to freshman of every color and of every variety. Some are distinctively classic, and inspire us with a deep-fledged loyalty and devotion to our institution. From this high rank they shade off into the ruder sort, such as questionable pranks practiced on the unsuspecting.

To this last variety belongs a Trinity tradition that has come down through recent years, known as "Who wet 'Dean' Hunt?"

It was a cold Saturday afternoon in the winter of 1907. "Dean Hunt" was making his last round of the campus before going home to prepare for the day of rest. Near the close of the round he approached the back door of the old "Wash" Duke Building on his way to the college office to report to "Doctor Jack" that "all's well" on the campus.

That report was never made. Just what became of it, no one knows—not even the "Dean" himself; for just as he squared himself upon the back door steps a seemingly "unending torrent of unutterable woe" descended upon him, and the report—well, the report and the "Dean" were separated during the flood.

It was a cloudy day, but the "Dean" knew that a cloudburst could not confine itself to so small an area. Loosening his garments from his skin and drawing a long, shivering breath, he bolted his 250 avoirdupois through the door and made for the stairway. There were four flights in that stairway and as many turns, but the "Dean" succeeded in landing his dripping bulkiness in the hallway of the top floor with flashing rapidity. Breathless and restless, he looked for his victim, while silence and emptiness gave him a most cordial reception. Up and down the hall he shambled, brandishing an ancient "barlow," and—well, the "Dean" has joined the church since that time. Not even the galvanized pail greeted his wrathful glances. The only clue he found was a few drops of soapy water on a window sill near the stairway—vertical in position relative to the backdoor below.

The "Dean" gave in a report, but it was a "minority" report. Just how much he longed to give in the lost report was known only to himself. "Who wet 'Dean' Hunt?" remained as much a mystery to him as it did to the college office. Of course, a student body never knows "who's who."

The incident was later immortalized in this parody given to Doctor Few as a "theme" in Freshman English:

Who Wet Dean Hunt

The boss stood on the backdoor steps When all his work was done; The smile that lit his brawny lips Shone round him like a sun.

There, fearlessly and proud, he stood As monarch of the grounds— When all at once a falling flood Caused him to utter sounds. He climbed the stairs with lengthy stride To take him by surprise— No one was there when he arrived To meet his fiery eyes.

As on his head the "slops" did fall,
And on his brand-new clothes,
He swore he'd catch that Freshman tall
And smash him in the nose.

He called aloud: "Say, Freshman, say, I dare you to come out"— And but the empty halls replied; So "Dean Hunt" went his route.

Perhaps it is well that the mystery was not solved—at least, not at that particular time—because, if it had been, I feel sure that this particular account would never have been written.

The Passing of the Class

Oh! how pensively thus we view at last

The college halls, where all our work was done!

And all those toilsome hours and pleasures past

Recall fond remembrances, one by one.

Oftentimes studying some famous poet's song. How now the pictures on the wall we see! All are dear as friends we've known so long. There are those classrooms where we used to be, No more we hear the noise we love so well. The very dormitories seem asleep;
Alas! for a trifle all hearts would weep,
For Trinity beckons a sad farewell,

The well-known bell sends forth those mournful peals;
Then to the ground the flag is lower'd again.
Oh! is there any passing one who feels
But that he would forever here remain?

All eyes are downcast; there falls a tear— With heavy hearts we Seniors say good-bye. How carnestly we wish for one more year To be with those we love most tenderly!

"UNCLE" JACK

Three Janitors

URING the past year three faithful servants of Trinity College have died. "Uncle" Frank Davis, "Uncle" Jack Dickerson, and "Uncle" Jim Loy they were, and the campus is the poorer for their absence. Not only were they interesting examples of the old-time negro, full of the negro's lovableness and cussedness, preserving in their lives the tradition of a vanishing day, but they were true men, serving well in their spheres, and making Trinity, by so much, the better. "Uncle" Frank in the Library, "Uncle" Jack in the Gymnasium, and "Uncle" Jim in the Inn and in Aycock had become as much a part of the College as the buildings themselves.

About the hour of one every day there was a conference of the jamtors on the road in front of the Science Hall. The merest passerby could see that in these meetings a leading part was played by the three now departed. "Uncle" Jack standing on the curoing delivering a lecture, "Uncle" Frank in the background, tolerant, even sympathetic, but somewhat aloof, and "Uncle" Jim enthusiastically pressing up in the front ranks—all revealed their characters, as well as harmonized into a picture. As the crowd passed by to dinner, hats were lifted, bows made, and the conference reconvened.

Today things have changed. Other hands wield the broom and the duster, other backs bend in making our beds, other voices call us from the last sweet slumber before rising, other feet run our little errands and wear our old shoes, other churches profit by our alms; and the wheels seem to turn on as of old, the work appears to be done as efficiently as ever, but the memory of the old faces and the old mannerisms will linger long in a tender corner of our hearts.

If foremost place must be assigned in this triumvirate, it should go, perhaps, to "Uncle" Jack on account of his greater length of service. He was a janitor in Trinity College for over twenty years. Dr. Few gave a just estimate of his life in the words: "He was one of the most faithful servants of any kind that the College ever had. His life should be an inspiration to every Trinity student. Although his skin was black, his soul was white." It was quite fitting that representatives of the various departments of athletics should serve as pallbeaters at his funeral, and that a large number of the students should turn out to do honor to his ashes.

Voices in the Night

BY R. H. BENNETT, JR.

OICES in the Night. You hear them from seven o'clock till twelve. There is no getting rid of them; no escape from them. If your door is open, they rush in: and if it is locked, they sift through the keyhole, to pour their mingled harsh and melodious accents upon you. Good or bad, you have to listen as you hear them.

The first Voice in the Night is so inquisitive and insistent that, no matter where you may hide yourself, it will reach your ears. At the beginning of the week it is very loud, and dies into silence as the week grows old, only to break forth with renewed energy on the following Monday. However much we may dislike the Voice or its tune, we durst not risk our reputation by not heeding its notes for two Mondays. And no matter how loud or how often it may speak, it has but one utterance for us to heed—"Laundry? Pressing?" It is the Voice of Respectability of Attire.

The second Voice speaks less frequently than the first, but with more attractive accents. In the early fall and spring this Voice bursts into a melody of song which fills the campus to overflowing and delights every listener. With its first note it casts an endless shower of blotters over the campus, and when the new styles appear, a fellow just can't resist the lure of its song. Then you always hear: "We've got a good line, Come down and look us over." It is the Voice of the College Representatives.

A less pleasant Voice is sometimes heard on the park. Its accents are bold and commanding; its tone is reserved, and it is rarely guilty of levity. Unexpected, uncalledfor, unwelcomed, this Voice often enters your room, mumbles something about tacks in the wall, ink on the floor, or extra lights, and dies away. Often we give a stare when we think we hear this Voice, and always our ears are straining to hear the Voice before its full force reaches us, just as our eyes might strain to see an unwelcome spectre before its approach. And when we listen for the Voice, we hear it say: "Lights out up there, Freshman." It is the Voice of Authority.

There is another Voice in the Night—the most pleasant—whose whispers may be neard on the campus at any time. It is just talk—talk about fishing, home, the "movies," the stock market, the baseball team, habits of the Eskimo, who will be the next President, girls, the European war, when we shall go home, South America, bills, and things. Were it not for this Voice, the Voices in the Night were but an empty jargon stripped of the living note which makes them human. And because the Voice is just talk, it hasn't an articulate voice; it is just a "line," It is the Voice of Comradeship.

The last Voice in the Night starts scarcely audible at the first of the year, runs with an ever-increasing volume through both terms, and ends in a hubbub of noise at Commencement. It belongs to the bill collector. Keeping up its cry of money, more money, always money throughout the year, its tone is desperate, pleading, or vindictive, threatening. Just because it does run along through the year carrying in its notes the molif in the Quintet of Voices, its variations are infinite. "Here is that laundry bill, two months overdue," "I would like to get you to settle for those shoes," or "If you don't pay your literary society dues this week, you can't vote," are some of its themes. There are but two things you can do to this Voice—stifle it with a check or tell it your check "will be here in a few days." Both methods are alike ineffectual. The Voice always returns to harass you; to silence it for good and all is impossible. It is the Voice of Finance.

If you are rooming on the campus you can escape the Chorus of Voices no more than you can cut classes, and you won't want to. Although the Voices, heard separately, like the notes of a 'cello, may sound harsh, when they are united they blend harmoniously in the Melody of College Life. To outsiders they are harsh, ill tuned; to us they are harmonious, but they are more—they are something intimate, personal, these Voices in the Night.

The Law Students

BY M. G. ELLIS

TO long have you been neglected in these pages, disciples of Blackstone and Mordecai! In former years the chivalrous Chanticleer has regaled us with sketches of cur noble faculty, our efficient janitors, our pompous "Dean" Hunt, our nocturnal guardian, "O. T." our numerically inexhaustible organizations, and, lest we forget, of our "dear college ladie," that dainty denizen of the damsel domicile. It ill befits the dignity of our Chanticleer to give space to these frivolous things before the might and majesty of the law has been upheld. And the law shall be upheld, even though this pen trembles at thought of the words it must trace.

The Trinity Law School inspires respect for that vague and unknown quantity, the law. Its students are among us, but we regard them as in a world apart. sedate mien, their detached air, their downcast eyes, and the great brown-backed books they carry, all tell us that their sphere is a higher one than ours. We see them standing apart in small groups discoursing learnedly of constitutions, statutes, decisions, procedures, and other things far beyond the comprehension of our poor academic minds. We have much the same feeling that we had when father first took us to court in the country town so many years ago. The lawyers, standing self-possessed amid the perspiring rabble of the courtroom, and pleading eloquently the cause of some "unfortunate client," were almost as great heroes in our eyes as our idolized "Buffalo Bill" and "Jesse James." And some of the glamour still remains.

There seems to be a popular belief extant that to be a duly accredited law student here one must become "hard," in the campus meaning of the term. We are told that a certain student of almost Puritanical demeanor thought it necessary to repair to the "dope shop," buy a plug of "Sun-Cured," and give vent to a few explosive cuss words before he might enter the inner sanctum of our much-heralded law school. We deny the allegation, out of respect to the shades of the departed, and in loyal defense of our co-citizens of the campus. Suppose contact with the records of past crimes has made them a trifle "game." Or, again, what if the perusal of dry tomes has made them bookish and somber? No one can blame them. They are but creatures of environment.

Bring forth each and every material allegation. We deny them all. There is no bias or prejudice on our minds. We know the Trinity law students. We assert that they are good fellows, and we predict success for them. Not many years may elapse before some derelict of '16 will require legal talent to free him from a charge of vagrancy. Perhaps, too, one of our "dear ladies" may desire alimony. Then to the Trinity attorney we will go. In him will we put our trust.

Wanted—Appreciation

BY LUCILE E. BALDWIN

OULD the end never come? I waited restlessly and nervously, straining my eyes for a glimpse of the end which must be on the way; the end which would mean liberty, which, if it came in time, would save me, yes, save me from embarrassment, from stares, from a penetrating look shot from fierce brown eyes, and, above all, from the awful humiliation of repeating once again the oft-repeated "reason why." Is it any wonder I longed for the end to come?

I shivered as I waited, shivered with the cold and from anxiety. Not far off a bell tolled slowly. I counted desperately. Nine! But my waiting was over. At last the end, the end of the long freight train was in sight. Slowly it crawled by. I shot across the track, cut through a vacant lot, rushed past the gate and up the long walk, slammed the front door, and a second later, breathless, but triumphant, I dropped into my chair and gasped "Here!" as the Professor called the roll of his nine o'clock class.

Yes, I am a town co-ed, and, being convinced that we are the most unappreciated of students, I write in the interest of my fellows and of those to follow. Neither the professors nor the other students realize the trials and tribulations, the sufferings and temptations of the members of my band. Do they know that as often as they ask "Why are you late?" the question rises in our hearts, "Why, oh, why, was Trinity built near a railroad track?" Do they know the agony we undergo when the trains begin to shift, how we rave at the company, but are powerless, unless—we exult in the thought—unless they should hold us longer than ten minutes? How we should glory in suing them! But the gates are always lifted during the fifty-ninth second of the tenth minute.

And how quizzically, how doubtfully, how very unsympathetically, we are regarded when we plead a headache for unprepared lessons, or for classes not attended! Why do people suppose town students to be immune from all varieties of sickness?

But even these troubles grow insignificant before the seriousness of our struggle with temptations. They assail on every hand, and must be overcome, not once, but nightly. The "Few" rules of the Fraushack are not binding on us; there is no eagle-eyed matron to watch our actions; we are free; we may go "where'er we listeth," and have "dates" whene'er we will (provided, of course, that a "dater" is willing), and the call of the movies is ever insistent.

If professors could only realize that temptations of all sizes and shapes must be manfully conquered by the town co-ed before she can "schriebt das Deutsch" or follow the campaigns of Napoleon, they would look upon her with greater respect, admire her strength of character acquired through virtues of commission—and be a little more sympathetic with her sins of omission. Of course, he never neglected his school work because the moon was full and the swing on the porch was empty; but—oh, well, he was never a woman, nor a co-ed, nor, above all, a town co-ed at Trinity.

The Conversation Room at Trinity College

BY FLORENCE HOLTON,

GENTLE cough and tap on the elbow caused the frightened co-ed to glance up from the list of rules on the library table near the door.

"A-a-hem! That is the young ladies' reading room back yonder," said the librarian.

Surprise almost overcame the girl's fright and embarrassment.

"Why, I thought—that is, I don't see any—" she stammered, looking toward the back of the library at a row of bookshelves. "Where are the girls?"

This happened several years ago.

"Mary, Mary, who's that good-looking man that came in just now?"

"Who? Where is he? Show me quick."

"Look! That one with the gray suit and purple tie. Oh! I wish he mould look back here!"

A half dozen girls stood up on tiptoe to stare over their prison of bookshelves at the "good-looking man." Lucile sighs and picks up her books to find a more quiet place to study.

"What you studyin', Kate?"

"Dr. Brown's English. I despise it. Who ever heard of anybody havin' to read all this stuff?"

"Sh-sh! There's Professor Wannamaker," and a half-suppressed giggle is heard as the girls try in vain to appear studious until Professor Wannamaker closes the door of the faculty reading room.

"E-e-e!" squeals Mary aloud when Minnie gives her a dig in the side. Everyone giggles, and the boys in the main reading room crane their necks to see the fun.

"Sh! Here comes Mr. Breedlove." Everyone is diligently studying when Mr. Breedlove walks slowly across the library to the museum.

"Girls! did you see that phenomenon just now?" exclaimed Betty in an audible whisper as she rushed breathlessly into the room. "I passed Dr. Graves just now and he actually spoke!"

"You know he didn't! What's going to happen? Say, are you going to read all those parallel books Dr. Few told us to? He's crazy if he thinks I'm going to."

Just then attention is called to the other side of the room. One of the braver of the boys has ventured over there, and Pyramus and Thisbe are talking, not through a chink in the wall, but over the wall. The whispering in the room is subdued for a minute, while everyone is wondering what Mary and John are talking about.

No girl now on entering Trinity College Library for the first time is embarrassed like the timid maid of ten years ago, wondering where she can sit and be least observed by the crowd of boys. The girl of today has only to pause for a minute at the door and she will soon be reassured by the buzzing as of many bees in the back of the room.

Long live the conversation room!

College Politics, or Prometheus Retired

A TRAGEOY IN THREE ACTS

Dramalis Personae: TAMMANEUS
His Lieutenants
Chorus of the People

ACT I

Trinity campus; Tammaneus sitting on stone bench at sundown.

TAMMANEUS

'Tis possible, for all things may be done By one who tries. Two years have I been boss Of all the politics upon this park. Have I not named the last four presidents Who ruled Hesperia? Was it not I Who named the figure-heads who puff with pride Whene'er a meeting of a class is called, And, since they wield the gavel, think they rule? At my least beck or call they humbly come To do my bidding, whispering round to those Who follow them as they serve me what stand To take in any issue I would win. The editors of the college papers owe To me their honors; it was I who packed The boards by which they were elected. They dare not disobey my strict command To turn the public eye where I direct. The frats, though torn with tumult 'mongst them-

Array in order at my slightest breath.

The unwashed multitude? Bah! They count

They do not think. They have no voice save that

Of my lieutenants, who lead them like sheep. 'Gainst that array how can this new-born club, This Wilson-Gardner Democratic move, Hope to get by without me at the head To shape its policies and name the men Who hold the reins of power? I'll just horn in

And show these upstarts that I cannot thus Be thrown into the discard.

Who are these
I see approaching? Methinks it is a part
Of that fond multitude who think they rule
Because they are the people. Puck jested not
Who said, "What fools these mortals be!"

FIRST VOICE
The club is formed, the ballots cast,
The people's resolutions passed.
The people's sway shall ever last.
Democracy forever!

SECOND VOICE

No politician's power
Can balk our onward way.
They fawn and cheat and cower
And fool us for an hour,
But then we have our say.
Wilson and Democracy!
Let the people rule!

THIRD VOICE

Long may the people with strength that ne'er faileth

Hang to the reins they have snatched from the ring.

Down with the dictators! Down with the bosses!

Make way for Liberty! Sing, comrades, sing!

Chorus

Wilson and Democracy! Let the people rule!

First Echo Let the people rule.

SECOND ECHO

The people rule.

TAMMANEUS

Fools! Fools! Yea, more than fools, to think That they, without a brain to scheme, to plan, Without a hand to guide, could with success Accomplish anything in politics! The people rule! Ha, ha! the idea tickles me. The mob Turns on its benefactors, who devote Their time and labor to the public good. But I'll away and gather my cohorts Of faithful henchmen. We shall name and plan For this convention platform, officers, And policies. Then let the people rule By putting into force the plans we lay.

ACT II

Scene: A room in a dormitory. Tammaneus and his henchmen gathered.

TAMMANEUS

Well, brothers, once again we meet to shape The people's will. This Wilson-Gardner Club Would a convention hold to nominate The Democratic ticket. Though the spoils seem small

To us so used to honors, still our names Will decorate the Durham Sun as well As any others; therefore let us plan To force the people's choice to fall on us. Do you agree to let me take the lead?

CHORUS OF LIEUTENANTS

We have followed you often, and always to victory;

In the Annual our write-ups are long as your arm.

Again we will follow; direct our endeavors;

The votes of the people will ne'er do us harm.

The voice of the people—we're the voice of the people:

So let not the people your spirits alarm.

FIRST LIEUTENANT

The frats are mine,
I'll give the sign;
You'll see them tumble into line.
The man to win
Must wear a pin;
I am the best man you will find.

SECOND LIEUTENANT
My voice will swing the Park School Club
To any vote 1 choose.
Give me a chance to land a job—
1 simply cannot lose.

THIRD LIEUTENANT
Behind me the Town Boys will follow;
For me they will vote in a body as one.
Give me an office—they can't help but swallow
The line I shall hand them. I've already won.

FOURTH LIEUTENANT
I'll work among the hard-boys
And bring them into camp.
The unaffiliated
Already bear my stamp.

CHORUS OF LIEUTENANTS
We're gunning for the bacon!
Rake it in, rake it in!
We're gunning for the bacon!
Rake it in, rake it in!

Есно

Rake it in.

TAMMANEUS

Your pep is good; now let us plan a way To cop the spoils. You know our system well. The national committee first must choose One of our number to hold down the seat Of chairman. Then the rest of us must find Seats on the delegations of each state. Our friends Must be distributed about the hall, to swing The votes around them. I shall scout around To find some good non-partisan to rise And nominate in order all of us For jobs. The chairman's seat is mine; to you Will fall the other offices. The votes Cast by our followers will do the rest. I'll get a man to count the votes who'll see To our election. Let your slogan be: Wilson and Democracy! Let the people rule!

Chorus

Wilson and Democracy! Let the people rule!

Есно

The people rule.

ACT III

Scene: The chapel; a crowd just coming out from the convention.

CHORUS OF THE PEOPLE

Sing aloud, sing aloud!

The people's voice has spoken.
Bring a shroud, a sable shroud,
For tyranny that's broken.
The people's will shall ever be
Monarch till eternity.
Sing aloud, sing aloud!
The people's voice has spoken.

FIRST SEMI-CHORUS

Hail to Tammaneus,

The people's candidate.

He was our choice, he heard our voice;

He steers the ship of state.

No boss can filch our power;

We cherish it fore'er.

We follow Tammaneus,

The people's Tammaneus;

'Tis he alone can free us

From politicians' fear.

SECOND SEMI-CHORUS We fear not Tammaneus;

His voice is ever wise.

He always comes to see us
And does as we advise.

We tell him what our wishes are;
He never fails our call.

Here's ho! for Tammaneus,
The leader of us all.

CHORUS

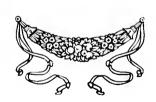

We fear not Tammaneus,
Democracy's own son.
Here's ho! for Tammaneus;
The people's will be done.
FIRST ECHO
The people's will be done.

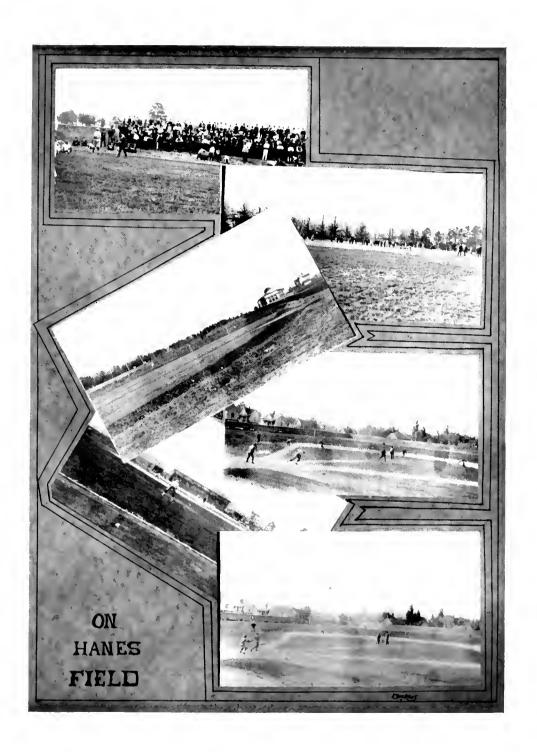

SECOND ECHO

Will be done.

TAMMANEUS

Ye fear me not? Ha, ha! Ye know me not. I am your guiding star, and I shall guide Wherever Tammaneus' interest lies. Indeed, it seems a shame to take the power From such defenseless boobs. It seems too much Like taking candy from a kid. But Iskabibble! I am the people! Let the people rule!

Pullman Porters

BY J. W. WALLACE

LL Pullman porters fall into two classes: black and yellow. Of these the yellow is by far better suited to the profession. His saffron hide vests him with inherent qualities which are lacking in his darker kinsman. Note his impassive dignity as he swings through his domain, oblivious of shifting intruder and of baby's wail. Demand his services and you interrupt business of shifting intruder and of baby's wall. Demand his services and you interrupt business of state. Pausing an instant to quiet some inquisitive transient, he rushes to a rear compartment for a grand inspection. Back he ploughs to his secret cabinet and extracts a duster. A provincial traveler stops him to inquire the distance to his destination. To be found wanting in figures of distance is a fatal admission of "porteric" inefficiency.

Indeed, no twentieth century negro with social pretensions can ignore the distance to Norfolk or Washington. Even the boy who blacks my shoes knows. Norfolk is Naples. But I digress.

I have left the master of the coach struggling with an international problem, the distance to Harriman Junction. His plaited forehead unfolds, and slowly, gradually, the problem's solution oozes down through multifarious channels to the lips, and he is ready to dispense the desired information. Harmonizing countenance to word, he answers: "Madam, I believe you will find it thirty-seven miles." The passenger dismisses this disclosure as trivial, but to the porter in his world of traveling bags and berths it is a triumph.

In the category of distance, however, the black service is equally competent, but in matters of technique the yellow quickly shows its superiority. I am nearing my destination. I look up and find my saffron man standing, whisk-broom in hand. He thinks: "All gentlemen wish to be brushed after traveling; he is a gentleman; he will wish to be brushed." Now, the man of black countenance doubts my gentility. He questions if I am accustomed to such usage, and is reluctant to embarrass me. He brushes my clothes as he would curry a horse, and gets only a dime, because that's all he expects. He doesn't know that all gentlemen are fools—that is, all gentlemen of respectability. Now: the saffron porter does. He brushes my worn gray with solicitous care; should I emerge from his establishment with a dusty sleeve, his record is besmirched. He squats before me, puffs, blows, contorts his features, struggles madly with a speck of mud, and convinces me that my appearance is of personal concern to him. I give him a quarter and feel that I have received full value. No gentleman may keep his self-respect and give him less.

He accepts his wage with a nod far more conventional than the day laborer with a hundred feet of ditch to vouch for his toil. He gives dignity to the profession, this yellow man.

Grub Dispensary

By J. H. Burrus

S every rose has its thorn, so every college has its boarding house; otherwise designated by the more familiar terms of beanery, hash-factory, or mess-hall. There is no earthly excuse for the existence of the beanery, except that it is absolutely necessary. The student can cut his classes, but the boarding house, never; else he will kick the bucket. This truth applies either to hardboys or sports, Freshmen or Seniors, janitors or members of the faculty.

Only three elements are necessary for the operation of this indispensable institution: First, there is the grub-dispensing element; second, the grub element; and, third, the grub-receiving element. Between this triarchy of elements there is a peculiar, and often a strained relation, which is both dependent and indissoluble.

The dispensing element is composed of three parts—the landlady, the cook, and the waiter. Of these three, the black element is the most important. It mixes itself freely with the dough, and sees to it that all food is properly conglomerated. Sometimes buckets of flour and hams of meat attach themselves to this element of their own accord. The white element merely hangs around in the culinary department, for use in cases of emergency. Her services are called into play every time the cook drops a few saucers on the floor. Her chief desire is to boss, and take in the kale. As for the waiting element, nothing can be for use

said, except that it likes to be careless and spill sundry liquids and pastries on your new suit.

Of chief concern to the receivers is the grub element. Here the cook has great possibilities for displaying her aesthetic tastes in regard to the cuisine, but only once do I remember of her ever having made this mistake. It was when she served white chocolate cake, because she forgot to put the flavoring in. With the exception of this experience, I believe our grub has failed to shift its scenery. For breakfast, there are the Quaker oats, Battle Creek fodder with cow juice to mix, black strap and hard milk, hen fruit, and the eternal tough bull. At dinner, the beans, black, blue, white, red, Boston baked, butter, soup, reheated, and a few other varieties are always on hand. Peas, a la cow, a la French, have their special reserved places. And there is the so-called vegetable soup, and potatoes, both yellow and white, and more bull, rare bull. Fried apples in library paste is one of the most popular desserts, with the cook. Now supper; I had almost forgotten the grits. Add to this rare article of diet, Limberger, and the scraps from the other two meals, and you have supper to a nicety. To eat or NOT to eat; that is the question.

During exams, students should studiously avoid any food containing arsenic, alkali, or nitric oxide.

Most boarding houses have an eating place. Here are generally collected at least thirty components of the receiving element. Each has a method all his own for hiding his share of the grub, and of asking for the same. Some few take it in retail; others, wholesale. The pocket is often used for this purpose effectively. At all up-to-date beaneries, great originality is displayed by the receivers in securing the desired sort of grub. "Shoot the bull" has established itself as a maxim. "Pass the fodder" is fast coming into popular use. Freshmen often make the mistake of calling cow juice, milk; hen fruit, eggs; zip, syrup, and the grandstand, jelly. After a year or so of careful training, they become educated up to the use of this artistic vocabulary. The list is being augmented rapidly. Conversation of any other sort is rarely, if ever, engaged in.

At present there is no substitute for the college boarding house except the cafe, and, gosh! my mind ferments at the thought of it.

The Boarding House Manager

Ti

T the first of school you have seen him, meeting trains, wringing the hands of new students, falling upon the necks of old, and three times a day marshalling a column of those whom he has captured and leading them through the mud to the house. At the table you have seen him, keeping silent when all others grumbled and bragging on the beans and biscuit when all others were silent. After the meal you have seen him, lingered for a confidential chat with the boarding-house-lady and the boarding-house-lady's daughter. On class you have seen him, coming in late and counting over a pile of checks during a lull in the lecture. On the road you have seen him, declining an invitation to go elsewhere for a meal, and, instead, earnestly inviting the inviter to dine with him. You have seen him, you do see him, you will see him. He is the ever-present, ever-affable, ever-busy manager, representative, drummer, or runner of a college boarding-house.

Yes, friend, you have seen what the world sees, you have seen what the ail-enduring one shows, and you may have been deceived into envy of him, but you do not know. Attracted by mysterious rumors that "He gets his board for doing that," charmed by the air of jovialty, patience, and business which encompass him about, you may have resolved some day yourself to run a grub joint. Pause and give thanks that the voice of one who has drunk at the fountain of experience is now raised up to give timely warning. If you want money to burn on the ladies, and your pants are becoming thin in the seat, don't try to raise the sheekles by managing a college boarding-house. Take some easy way, such as carrying papers, washing dishes, selling shoes, or heaving coal. Hear and believe that "Boarding house representatives rush in where angels fear to tread."

The cares of the boarding-house manager are not individually large and grievous; his burden is made up of the multitude of gnawing annoyances, the straws that collectively cause the back of the camel to sag. Do you know the joy of loafing into school three days late the first of the year? The manager must be on the job three days early. Isn't it delightful to come into the dining room in a grouch and say disrespectful things about the cold biscuit and tough meat? The manager has got to swallow down all such feelings. What a satisfaction it is to change boarding places three times a year and tell them at every place how much more desirable the food is at the other house! Alas, the manager has to stick by his own vine and fig tree. How pleasant it is to knock around with those you like and avoid or scrap with those you dislike! But the poor manager must be smooth and smiles to all.

The manager is fussed at by the eaters for feeding so poorly, and scolded by the boarding-house-lady for collecting so slowly. About once a year or oftener there is a great hegira of boarders. Somebody happens to start at the psychological moment, and soon half the chairs in the dining room are standing cold and empty. Then the boarding house manager has a nice call on the boarding-house-lady, and she says Mrs. Perkins has just called up and told about her six new boarders, and she says she can't understand why the boys are leaving her, and there is Mr. Chase, that owes twenty-seven dollars, and she can't feed any better till she gets more boys, and is the manager on the lookout for new boarders, and will he come in and see her again after supper. Yessum. The uninitiated may love to get board for nothing and appear popular, but this is the life of the boarding house manager.

Just How

O the Editor, Business Manager and Staff of next year's Annual, the Editor, Business Manager and Staff of this year's Annual send greetings and salutations:

Having found by long experience and deep study the exact methods which produce the college annual par excellence, and realizing that this knowledge is possessed by us alone, we now take pens in hands and sum up certain simple little rules which, if followed, will enable you easily, quickly and pleasantly to grind out a Chanticleer, or if necessary a whole brood of Chanticleers, of a quality satisfactory to the faculty, popular with the students and creditable to yourselves.

- 1. Take cheerfully and follow exactly all advice of however conflicting a nature volunteered by any interested outsiders.
 - 2. Have every picture of club, individual, or bunch taken before Christmas.
- 3. Have the photographers do good work. If they don't, send to Washington or Goldsboro for another picture man.
- 4. Have about six students experienced in kodaking standing ready at all hours to take snapshots of people and occurrences of interest.
 - 5. Have all the drawings and cartoons printed in colors.
 - 6. Get about fifty (50) pages of advertisements.
- 7. Insist on placing a book in the hands, and extracting the price from the pockets of every man, woman and child connected with the college. (The last two rules will insure your book coming out free from debt, and may give you a handsome profit.)
- 8. Don't hurt anybody's feelings by insisting that he pay his bills immediately. Let him wait. What do you care?
- 9. Do not take personal cracks at anybody, however wise, foolish, big, little, dry, funny, or peculiar he may be. People don't like to have jokes poked at them.

- 10. Have the teams win a string of brilliant victories. They make good reading when cleverly written up.
- Publish every organization from Buncombe County Climbers to the Union of Future Blacksmith Helpers, with coat of arms and voluminously complimentary history.
- 12. Have about a dozen students whose talents are approximately equal to those of Mark Twain or Bud Fisher write up several pages of excruciatingly funny dope. People like to read it.
- 13. Have several excellent short stories, and a bunch of lyric poems of real merit on hand to fill up space with.
- 14. Never cut a class, sit up late, or neglect a lesson to work on the Annual. You might not get 100 on the course if you did.
 - 15. Spare no expense. The more money you sink into the book the finer it will be.
- 16. Dedicate the book either to the Prof. you need to boot or to the girl you want to marry. In that way the Annual will pay for the work you have put upon it.
- 17. Above all things, take life easy. If you don't do your assigned part of the work, somebody else will; and the old book will either come out somehow or not come out anyhow.

BOSS

Boss

BY V. C. HALL

F you are a Trinity man, you know him. Just when he came is uncertain.
Today the most brazen Freshman "on the park" would blush to ask:
"Who is Boss?" He is a fixture as secure as East Duke or Dean Hunt.
Two years ago he was not; now he is, and the wisest can tell no more.

His rakish derby and leatherette suit case are well known in Jarvis, Aycock, and the Inn, not to speak of the North. He rises while the dew is on the grass and the student is in bed. Throughout the day he infests the campus in search of suits; wrinkled suits, torn suits, threadbare suits, baggy-kneed suits, alike fall a prey to the watchful and persistent eye of "Boss." He solicits the meanest suit of the meekest Freshman with the same persistent enthusiasm that he practices upon the society brand of a Senior swell. Boss is absolutely impartial; a democrat of democrats. He hails Freshman and Senior, Greek and Barbarian, with "What chu got, 'Boss'?" He is equally at home in the splendor of the North and the squalor of the Inn. When business is dull he is a ready conversationalist and stands eager to discuss either the unseasonable weather or hard times. In the midst of recreation he continually keeps a weather eye open for "jobs" and will follow a rumor of business up and down a dozen flights of stairs.

His red head and redder face are thrust into every door on the campus every day in the week; supplication, abject respect, and intense personal concern mingle in his simple solicitation, "What chu got, Boss?"

Crook-kneed beneath an avalanche of suits, he shambles along soliciting trade in half-smothered tones from every loiterer or pedestrian on Trinity campus.

"What chu got, Boss?" The poor and proud he accosts alike, but his business rivals he will not accost; no, nor even approach—they, with the co-ed, are under the ban of "Boss" disapproval.

A modest man is "Boss;" reluctant to discuss himself except to a fortunate few who have captured his confidence. Among these few, this modest man assumes immense proportions; his long, bedraggled overcoat is a senatorial toga, his dusty derby a coronet. Those callous hands, now toil-worn from serving the unwashed multitude, once fashioned a suit of tweed for Dr. Graves. That jaded figure is sought after by every fraternal order in Christendom; even now he wears a Woodmen's button on his lapel and talks of "lodge night" and "fresh meat." Indeed, he is the last of an ancient line of Past Grand Masters.

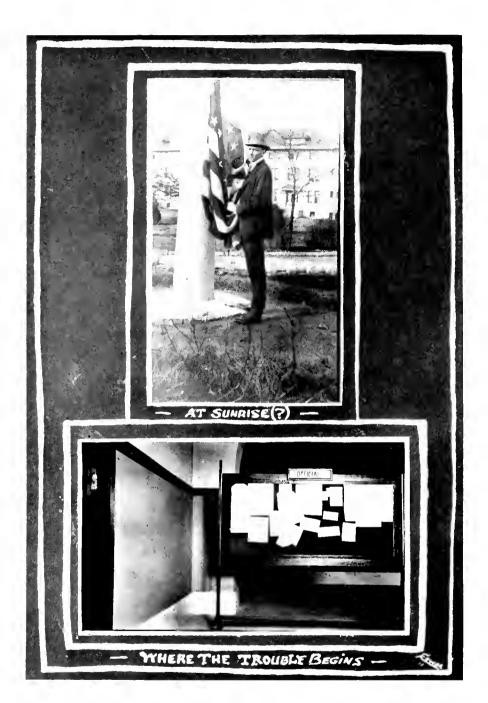

It is asserted on good authority that "Boss" is steadily amassing a fortune. Only yesterday he passed through the Inn wearing a brand-new blue serge, with smile to match. The derby had assumed a holiday air, and the shoes were radiant. Questions failed to draw him out; stoutly denying accusations of prosperity, "dandyism," or courting propensities, he continued to speak of poor business and hard times; yet that air was unmistakable.

When the announcement of his removal to "bigger and better quarters" appeared on the bulletin board this morning the "wise heads" read and winked. "Better watch Boss."

When Wake Forest paint recently besmirched Trinity campus, "Boss," like Cincinnatus of old, left furrows half-plowed and suits unpressed, girded his loins, and strode forth to blot the stain from Trinity's escutcheon. The tumult and the shouting died at his approach, crowds gave way before his Achillian stride. For an instant "Boss" halted before Memorial Hall, glowering darkly upon the hated score, done in bloody numerals on our very doorstep. Three hundred eyes watched as he drew a bottle and rag from an inner pocket; three hundred hearts beat high as he viciously scrubbed that vermilion sign; three hundred throats yelled approval as he literally obliterated the paint which had defied Dean Hunt and his entire staff.

"It's 'Boss' Patent Paint Remover," he shouted as the sea of admirers inundated him.

Today the most brazen Freshman on the park would blush to ask, "Who is 'Boss'?"

Booshwa*

The trader all intent upon a sale

Made gestures wide and sighed and bit his nail.

Long and loud he talked, a pewter spur

To swap for the Red-skin's buffalo fur.

The wrinkled warrior scarce raised his head,

But with a grunt and shrug of doubt he said,

"Booshwa, booshwa."

The English Prof. with frenzy in his eye,
Cleared his throat and coughed and fixed his tie.
W'th one hand deep down in his pocket sunk
He loudly spoke of Mr. Woolley's junk;
Hitching his trousers and wheezing again
He praised the poets and hinted of Linn.
The student fell not for the weary line
But turned and whispered to the man behind,
"Booshwa, booshwa."

*"Booshwa" is an Indian expression which may be variously translated into idiomatic English as "hot air," "line of bull," etc.

The Walrus and the Carpenter

AN EPIC
(For private circulation only.)

The son came from beneath the trees;
His smile was calm and bright.
He did his very best to make
His coming noiseless quite,
Which was not strange, because it was
The middle of the night.

The Walrus looked on,
Because she thought the son
Had got no business to be there,
For dates that night were none.
"It's very rude of him," she said,
"And I will spoil his fun."

The girls were quiet as quiet could be;
They did not laugh or cry.
The box was lowered silently,
Was seized and hurried by.
The deed seemed good, but they knew not
The Walrus there did spy.

The Walrus to the Carpenter
Went straight at break of day,
And wept like anything to tell
What she had come to say.
"Those girls are awful," this she cried;
"No ladies act that way."

"If you should bring those girls up here And lecture them awhile, Do you suppose," the Walrus said, "They'd be less of a trial?" "I doubt it," said the Carpenter, And tried to check a smile.

"Oh, girls, you must not act that way,"
The Walrus did beseech.
"You must not run away at night,
You must hark to my speech."
With this the Walrus darted
A scornful smile at each.

"You must go to the Carpenter
Repenting of your crime,
And you must promise him you'll not
Do so another time."
(This verse was hard to write, because
I was so scarce of rhyme.)

The six young girls they hurried up

And thought it quite a treat.

Their coats were brushed, their faces washed,

Their shoes were clean and neat,

But ere they reached the office

Much mud was on their feet.

"The time has come," he sadly said,
"To talk of many things—
Of feeding boys at 'leven o'clock,
Of boxes lowered with strings.
Of slipping off, and whether girls
Like you can hope for wings."

The girls sat round and heard him talk,
And wished they were away.
They did not say a word because
There was no word to say.
And so the Carpenter talked awhile,
Then bid them all good-day.

The Walrus she was deeply grieved
When they came home once more;
She almost wept to see the smilting faces that they bore,
And, when behind her own closed door,
I do not doubt she swore.

But, after all, the Fraushack
Goes on much as of old,
Although this story may explain
Why some girls aren't so bold,
And why the Walrus speaks to them
In accents rather cold.

O. T.

Who is it totes a lantern round like old Diogenes,
Looking not for honest men, but wayward boys?
Who is it puts the lights out in the midst of all our sprees?
Who is it that reports us for our noise?

O. T., O. T., oh, you wily old O. T.,
A-going to the faculty with stories of our sin.
O. T., O. T., oh, you fussy scold O. T.,
The cause of half the trouble that we're in.

Who is it lets short-riders paint the campus up bright red?

Who never sees the thing he ought to see?

Lets some fellows raise a roughhouse when they ought to be in bed,
But if I get in meanness, jumps on me?

O. T., O. T., oh, you big old bluff O. T.;
We all know how to make you keep things mum.
O. T., O. T., isn't that enough, O. T.?
You fuss at us, but we should worry—some.

Who is it tells us stories when we're feeling sorter blue?
Who is it that is good when we are sick?
Who is it if we boot him will go off and stay put, too,?
Who, if we're in real trouble, proves a brick?

O. T., O. T., oh, you good old scout, O. T.; If we need him he is always on the spot.
O. T., O. T., could we do without O. T.?
Well, I really rather guess that we could not.

On His Ignorance

(With apologies to the shade of John Milton.)

When I consider how my days are spent
And half my nights at this gay pace and wild,
And this great ignorance which I try to hide
So plainly evident, indeed my soul is so bent
To gain a little knowledge and present
A passing paper, lest the Prof. shouldst chide.
"Would that man dare to flunk me?" this I cried,

I fondly smiled, but wisdom to prevent
That self-assurance said: "Fle does not care
Whether you pass or fail, who hest
Get up their lessons please him best, I am Prepared to offer this one solace; hasten to where
Thou mayest study night and day, and take no rest.
They also pass who at the last do cram."

Lowering of the Class Flag

The last official act of the college year is the lowering of the class flag at sunset on Wednesday of Commencement. The cornet sounds the call for the assembling of the Class five minutes before sunset. After assembling, the Class sings college songs. As the sun sets the college bell is rung, and every Trinity man is expected to remove his hat, whether he is present at the exercises or not. The flag is lowered by the Class and turned over to the President of the College to be deposited among the archives of the College, and for future use by the Class.

D. W. NEWSOM, '99

(Tune: America)
Hark! the last clarion call
Brings sadness to us all,
O Trinity!
Last vow of love we bring,
Last song of thee we sing;
Our hearts to thee shall cling Eternally.

Comrades, our day is done
And with yon setting sun
We say farewell—
Farewell to these dear halls,
Sweet lawns and stately walls,
Farewell to twilight calls
And lusty yell.

Face to the western skies,
Warm tears shall bathe our eyes
For Trinity.
Sweet memories entwine
Around this sacred shrine
And bind our lives to thine,
Dear Trinity.

Voice of thy mighty bell
Sounds now its saddest knell,
Stern Trinity.
Let every son she bred
Whose hungry soul she fed
Now bare his reverent head
And honor thee.

Flag of our country free,
Flag of our Trinity,
God bless thy stars!
Tattered thou mayest be,
Still do we honor thee,
Proud sign of liberty—
Thy stripes and bars!

Long live our Mother brave,
Long may Old Glory wave
O'er Trinity!
Truth, honor, faith, and love
Ne'er from thy sons shall move—
Steadfast as heaven above
To Trinity.

Even the Package is Sensible

¶ Fatimas were the first high grade cigarettes to use a common sense, inexpensive package—the value is in the cigarettes. ¶ They're comfortable to throat and tongue. And no mean after effects—they let you smoke as you'd like to smoke.

Bobbie's Easy Guess.

"Guess what's coming, Bobbie. Something you like best." And Bobbie, he says, "Ho! I guess I know what that is—it's

JELL O

Of course it is.

We wonder whether mothers generally understand how much their children love Jell-O and whether they know that it is as pure and wholesome as it is delicious. Let us hope they do.

Jell-O is put up in seven pure fruit flavors, and each makes a variety of exquisite desserts by the mere addition of boiling water.

The price is 10 cents, same as ever, at any grocer's or general store.

A beautiful new Jell-O book tells of a young bride's housekeeping experiences. It has splendid pictures in colors and will interest every woman. It will be sent to you free if you will send us your name and address.

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD CO., Le Roy, N. Y., and Bridgeburg, Ont. The name JELL. O is on every package in big red letters. Be sure you get JELL O and not something else.
